Old Collegians Luncheon Guest Speaker

Peter Fenton was born in Boggabri, New South Wales and educated at Parramatta High School. He then went on to play over 200 minor grade games for Parramatta and become one of Australia's legendary rugby union coaches.

Peter Fenton's professional career is varied, incorporating his love of writing, film and sport. He wrote and co-produced The Running Game, a one hour video on The Wallabies Tour of Great Britain in 1981, The African Campaign, a 90 minute video on the Wallaby tour of South Africa in 1992 and Pick Me Up and Run, a 50 minute video on how to play rugby, featuring the 1995 Wallabies.

Peter published his first book in 1992, a series of anecdotes on his coaching career and over 50 poems on Australian sport titled Sport The Way I Speak It. His second book, a biography on the great boxer, Les Darcy, The Legend of The Fighting Man was published in 1994, followed by his third book, For the Sake of the Game, released in March 1996, an account of the NSW Waratahs' tour of the United Kingdom and France in 1928/'29. Recent titles include They Called Him Boy, Andrew 'Boy' Charlton, the story of one of Australia's great Olympic idols and Olive, an account of the heroic life of a north Queensland girl who became an army nurse when Japan threatened to invade Australia in the early months of 1942.

Renowned as Australia's most prolific sound mixer of feature films, Peter has been responsible for the sound tracks of more than 200 Australian films since the early '70s. His Chief Mixer credits include Caddy, Sunday Too Far Away, News front, Picnic At Hanging Rock, The Getting of Wisdom, Gallipoli, Phar Lap, The Year of Living Dangerously, Evil Angels, The Russia House, Lightning Jack, I.Q. and Six Degrees of Separation.
